French Town, Long Under Foe's Heel, Welcomes Rescuers

French women and children welcoming British troops into town just evacuated by Germans.

Perhaps no conquering heroes ever got a warmer reception than the British Tommies and French poilus who walked through terrific German fire into the villages of northern France, which for nearly three years has been under the German yoke. In the photo the populace of one of these "lost villages" is seen flocking along with one of the advance regiments. Regular marching order was impossible, for the women and children hurried themselves through the lines to thank their deliverers.

OGDEN POSTOFFICE MAKES RECORD IN THE PURCHASE OF THE LIBERTY LOAN BONDS

Every mail clerk, carrier and other employee of the Ogden postoffice has subscribed for at least one liberty bond, ranging from $50 upward. Such was the announcement made this noon at the postoffice, following a general campaign in the federal building. The list of subscribers includes every person, male and female, that is in Uncle Sam's employ in the building. Even the janitor bought a bond.

Not satisfied with closing the campaign in the postoffice, Postmaster W. W. Browning stepped across the street to a garage and secured another subscription for $500 worth of bonds during the morning. In cases where postal employees found that they could not make immediate payment for the bonds or pay at the time the government requires installments, Postmaster Browning told the employees to go to their regular bank, sign a note for the amount and he would endorse it personally.

An amusing instance in connection with the campaign was when a man brought $200 to the postoffice for deposit in the postal savings bank, thereby securing the same security as the bond issue but only 2 per cent interest, when he could have stepped to another window and subscribed for bonds bearing 3½ per cent interest. Following the campaign in the postoffice, a similar campaign will be instituted by United States railway mail service men and in the United States forest service.

Assistant Forester McCann said this afternoon that individually many of the forest service employees had arranged to subscribe for bonds, but as yet no concerted action had been taken.

"The forestry service men and women will probably all subscribe," he said, "but we've been too busy getting other things ready for Uncle Sam. The forest service has been interested in the formation of the forestry regiment in taking the military census, compiling data of all kinds, besides looking after regular work that means much toward production of food supplies, timber and other necessities."

The Southern Pacific railroad is arranging a system by which its employees can purchase bonds on the installment plan, according to word received in Ogden, and it is expected that other railroads centering here will take similar action.

NO ALARM OVER THE SUPPLY OF COAL NEXT WINTER

E. R. Hunt, representative of the Utah Fuel company, while in Ogden today, expressed the opinion that there need be no undue alarm felt in regard to a shortage of coal next winter.

"Prevailing conditions in that regard," he said, "are due to the late season. More coal is being delivered to dealers and consumers now than at this time last year, but much more is also being used. It is also true that many people are beginning to store away fuel for next winter. This is a good thing, as it is easily apparent that those who have their cellars or sheds full of coal will not need to make their call at a time when transportation facilities are at a premium."

Mr. Hunt, who is a former resident of Ogden and an employee of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, had little to say about probable $8 coal next winter, but inferred that the price might reach a high level on account of increased costs of production and delivery. He also emphasized the importance of the public preparing for

SHOPMEN HEADED BY BAND TO PARADE ON JUNE 5

At least one parade will be given in Ogden on Tuesday, registration day, for the Southern Pacific railroad men have decided to show their patriotism and approval of the national army plan by marching on that day. Such parades will meet with approval of the war department, according to the recent orders issued.

The railroad men will be headed by the large Southern Pacific band of at least 45 pieces and will probably parade through the business districts. The hundreds of men from the shops, together with office men and men from train crews are planning on getting in line for the parade.

INDIVIDUAL HAS NO RIGHT TO OPEN A STREET

That a private individual has no right to condemn private property, even though the purpose is to provide a public thoroughfare, was the decision announced this morning by Judge A. W. Agee in the district court in ruling on demurrers in the case of Effie Campbell against A. R. Heywood.

Dr. E. L. Rich, C. J. Lindquist and other property owners on Washington avenue between Twenty-sixth street and Herrick avenue.

The demurrers entered by the defendants were upheld, and as Judge Agee ruled that amendments to the complaint would not change the situation, the case was concluded by the judge's action. The purpose of the case was to open an alleyway passing the rear of the Stephens apartments and taking land from various properties facing Washington avenue.

Agee said in part: "To my mind it is clear that the sovereign power to establish streets within the corporate limits of a city has been delegated to cities exclusively and that no private corporation or individual can compel the establishing and opening of a public street in a city. It is inconceivable that the legislature ever intended to confer on any person who may own land within a city the right to compel the city, against its wishes and the judgment of its controlling authorities, to create a public street for the maintenance of which the city is liable."

"If the contention of the plaintiff is correct, the city cannot only be burdened with the expense of maintaining a street that it has not accepted, but it may be made liable for any injury resulting from a defect in the street that it has refused to create or establish."

"Besides to give a private corporation or individual the right to compel the creation of a public street and the city the power to vacate such street would be an absurdity, so that no such conflict of authority could ever have been contemplated by the lawmaking body."

winter by laying in an adequate supply of "black diamonds."

INDIGNATION OF THE PROPERTY OWNERS ON 28TH STREET

Ogden City as a municipality, has filed its answer in the Twenty-eighth street paving injunction case, the papers being placed on record in the district court this morning. The case is one instituted by George E. Browning, Seth E. Thomas, Earl R. Geiger, Ada Quinn, George Tolmie, Mary Tolmie and John G. Ellis against Abbot R. Heywood, Miles L. Jones, Chris Flyvare, Ogden City, and P. J. Moran, Inc., by which the property owners seek to prevent the city officials and contracting company from proceeding with the paving on Twenty-eighth street.

The city denies that two-thirds of the property owners protested, denies that a meeting for protest was not held on February 6, 1917, and declares that the proceedings were regular in every way. While the case is before the courts the contracting company has assembled material, equipment and men on Twenty-eighth street and started excavating work last evening in front of the Geiger home, near Grant avenue. This action has aroused the ire of every property owner on the street and indignation meetings are being held.

INDIVIDUAL HAS NO RIGHT TO OPEN A STREET

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Investigation of far eastern markets for American fruit will be undertaken immediately by Anson B. Hatcham, a fruit specialist, the department of agriculture announced tonight. The inquiry will include Japan, China, Australia, the Philippines and eastern Siberia.

WORLD'S MARKETS

NEW YORK, June 1.—Rumors growing out of the temporary closing of the port of New York today by the navy department gave rise to considerable apprehension and precipitated free selling before the end of the first hour. Stock reacted to 126.34 on sales of large blocks and other leaders reversed early gains by 2 to 5 points. Motors weakened even before offered figures to 1c higher, were followed by a break to well below yesterday's finish all around and a subsequent rally failed to hold.

Continued wet weather lifted the corn market. Growth conditions were said to call instead for warmth and sunshine. After opening 1-4c to 13-4c higher, prices scored decided further gains, but lost much of the advance when wheat turned downward.

Oats followed wheat rather than corn. Scantiness of offerings, though, prevented any radical downturn. Weakness of rad acted as a weight on provisions. Nevertheless, shorts in
